Search for athletic director narrowed to six candidates

By Jim Acton
Daily Campus Staff

A new athletic director could be named within three weeks if the search continues on its present course, John Allen, chairman of the search committee said Monday.

Although he refused to name specific candidates, Allen said the field has been narrowed to four to six from almost 130 applicants. He said the final interviews have already begun.

"We're moving things along as quickly as we can," Allen said.

"Ideally, we'd like to finish up by the end of next week. That's our ultimate goal."

A list of three finalists will be sent to President John Casteen and he will pick the new director. "We'll give a list of names to the president and then it's up to him," Allen said.

The search committee was formed in late January to find a replacement for current Athletic Director John Toner. Toner will step aside as athletic director on June 30 but will remain with the athletic department to oversee construction of the new sports center.

Allen, a UConn geography professor, would not comment on news reports of possible candidates. Among those rumored in the running are Witchita State University Athletic Director Lew Perkins, UConn's Associate Director for Administration Pat Meiser, and Dee Rowe, a former UConn basketball coach and associate director for development.

"I've read those names and I won't even say if those are right," Allen said. "It's not fair to the candidates. I know if I were in the running for a position I wouldn't want everyone to know what I was doing."

The remaining candidates will be interviewed during the next two weeks by the 22-member search committee. According to Greg Barger, the only undergraduate member of the committee and a former UConn soccer player, the length of each interview depends on the availability of the candidates.

"There will be times when the larger group will meet (with the candidates)," Barger said. "But there will also be five or six people meeting informally. There are different times set aside when we're going to meet."

Allen said the remaining candidates are all capable individuals which will make the final decision even more difficult.

"Any one [candidate] is capable of doing a super job here," Allen said. "It's just a matter of who we think is the best. I hope the person he [Casteen] finally selects will be the person everybody else will agree is the top candidate."

Allen said that although the committee has set next Friday as its tentative deadline, it is under no pressure to rush into any decisions.

"We haven't been pressured by anyone to do anything," he said. "The president said 'this is your job,' and that's been it."

"Now, it's just a matter of who we think is the best."

Spring Weekend gets its MTV

By Sam Mendlestein
Daily Campus Staff

For those of you who have been screaming "I want my MTV," your cries have been heard. No, the UConn campus isn't being wired for cable. Instead, MTV is coming here in person.

The Student Union Board of Governors announced yesterday that MTV will cover Spring Weekend, also known as Unity Fest '87. MTV is doing this as part of a special, taped coverage of Spring Weekend celebrations at colleges across the country. Out of all the institutes of higher education across the country, MTV chose four.

This past weekend, the MTV crew filmed events and celebrations at Indiana and Syracuse universities. This weekend MTV will be here and at the University of San Diego.

SUBOG first learned of the plans about two weeks ago when Kevin Fahey, SUBOG adviser, got a call from MTV's Barbara Eng, Fahey said.

Eng was calling colleges and universities across the country and asking them about their Spring Weekend activities. According to Fahey and Vice President of Programming Steven Knox, the musical lineup was the main reason for MTV's interest.

"They specifically said our program rundown, our concert rundown, was the best they've seen so far," said Knox. "They were very positive about the concert. That's the main reason they're coming."

"Everybody outside of UConn thinks that these bands are awesome," said Jim Heneghan, SUBOG Video Chairman. "Like right now, Joan Jett is on the cover of Spin [magazine]."

Heneghan, who runs WBOG-TV, will assist in producing MTV's coverage, including appointing two production assistants and two security

Peace protestors block roadways to CIA office

MCLEAN, Va. (AP)—Peace demonstrators protesting Reagan administration policies blocked roadways at CIA headquarters Monday, causing rush-hour chaos in this serene suburban community and inconveniencing hundreds of commuters. There were more than 550 arrests.

There were no incidents of violence in the protest, which culminated three days of demonstrations against American policies in Central America and southern Africa.

It was a day that evoked memories of the anti-war protests of the 1960s, replete with slogan shouting, singing, pamphlet passing, placard waving and speechmaking by a cross-section of people representing all regions, ages and races.

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson said that, so far as she knew, it was the first large-scale protest at the agency since the headquarters, about six miles from Washington, D.C., opened 25 years ago.

The U.S. Park Service said Fairfax County police, responsible for the south gate at the sprawling, tree-lined installation here, arrested 355 persons, of whom 90 were taken to jail for refusing to identify themselves or other reasons.

The U.S. Park Police, with jurisdiction over the north gate, arrested 183 persons. Another 15 were taken into custody by the Federal Protective Service.

From shortly after dawn until about10:30 a.m. EDT demonstrators sat down on roadways leading to the spy

Waldheim denied entry by U.S. for Nazi ties

WASHINGTON (AP)—Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, accused by Jewish groups of participating in Nazi war crimes, was today barred from entering the United States because of evidence that he persecuted people during World War II, the Justice Department announced.

"The evidence collected. . .establishes a prima facie case that Kurt Waldheim assisted or otherwise participated in the persecution of persons because of race, religion, national origin or political opinion," Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said in a statement.

The decision was taken by Attorney General Edwin Meese III on the advice of the State Department's legal affairs bureau.

"The Department of Justice has therefore ordered, as required by law, that Kurt Waldheim's name be added to the Watchlist," said Eastland's statement. "His name will be added to a lookout system "to alert consular officers as to his prima facie ineligibility for a visa to enter the United States," said the statement.

If Waldheim attempts to enter the country, he will be stopped at the border and told that, as he is on the Watchlist, he may not enter. He has the right to an administrative hearing if he wants to contest the matter.

Open spaces in rubble increase hope in search

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Workers were buoyed Monday by the discovery of open spaces in the wreckage of a collapsed apartment building, while unions set up a relief fund and volunteers from as far away as California offered to help in the search for 13 men still missing.

Mayor Thomas Bucci said 15 bodies had been recovered from the L'Ambiance Plaza by Monday afternoon, four days after the building collapsed. The search will be treated as a rescue operation until at least Saturday, the mayor said.

"We are looking for live people," said Jonathan Best, city director of emergency management. But hope diminished with every passing hour.

More than 500 people, including 250 high school classmates, attended a funeral for the youngest victim, 17-year-old Scott Ward. Ward had been working during his spring vacation to earn money for college.

"A whole town, a whole city is touched by what happened," said the Rev. William J. Conklin, pastor of Our Lady of Assumption Church in nearby Fairfield. "Let us be touched as well by the awareness of the goodness and love of God."

Dozens of Ward's classmates cried and a school choir sang during the 90-minute service and embraced afterward in the parking lot.

In Bridgeport, the collapse site was declared a disaster emergency area and searchers were sworn in as part of a civil preparedness team to make them eligible for medical and worker's compensation. Several searchers suffered minor injuries over the weekend.

"A lot of paychecks are going to have to be replaced. If children or wives are in need, they can get it from the international union," said Carpenters Union president Patrick J. Campbell, who visited the scene from Washington.

Reagan speaks to spur debate on trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Monday it's time to stop "hemming and hawing" about trade problems between the United States and Japan and warned he has not ruled out imposing additional sanctions against Tokyo to resolve trade disputes.

While saying he hopes to be able to lift sanctions against Japan soon, Reagan said, "we will do what is necessary to see that other nations live up to their obligations and trading agreements with us."

Meanwhile, 12 members ot Reagan's Cabinet said they will recommend a veto of sweeping trade legislation scheduled to be debated in the House of Representatives on Tuesday "unless substantial changes are made."

"Many provisions are so contrary to our objective of opening markets that it would be impossible for us to recommend that he (the president) approve the entire package in its present form," said the Cabinet secretaries in a joint letter to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

Reagan's remarks, in a speech before the annual meeting of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, set the stage for Tuesday's opening of the trade bill debate and meetings at the White House on Thursday and Friday with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

"The final answer is genuinely fair and open markets on both sides of the Pacific," he said. "And the sooner, the better."

Reagan said areas in which Japan's markets are more restricted than the United States' include semiconductors, supercomputers, auto parts, telecommunications, construction projects and agricultural products.

Police, students clash at anti-aparthied rally

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police fired birdshot and tear gas and used whips Monday in running battles with hundreds of student protesters, both blacks and whites, at the University of Cape Town.

It was believed to be the first clash in which police fired guns to control rioting at a predominantly white school, and it was one of the most violent campus disturbances since a national state of emergency was declared in June 1986.

The violence followed a midday rally by anti-apartheid student groups protesting a South African army commando raid Saturday on alleged guerrilla targets in Zambia. After the rally, students singing freedom songs marched through the campus at the foot of Cape Town's Table Mountain.

The government said some students were arrested, but it did not give numbers.

Journalists who were at the campus said at least five students were hit by birdshot, including one wounded in the face. A free-lance photographer and several students reportedly were hurt by whips.

No official reports of injuries surfaced immediately.

About 15 percent of the university's 12,000 students are mixed-race, black or Indian. The others are white.

Reporters said at least 100 police dealt with the unrest. The government's Bureau for Information said about 300 students were involved in clashes. Witnesses put the number at 400 to 500.

During the melee, reporters said, a police helicopter buzzed the campus, students barricaded themselves in the student union, and police broke through the locked door of a library where protesters sought refuge.

HARTFORD (AP)—State utility regulators, the attorney general and Connecticut Light and Power Co. announced a tenetative agreement that should mean $30 million in refunds to Connecticut electricity consumers.

The agreememt could keep CL&P electric rates stable through 1988, officials said.

The refunds, expected to take the form of credits on customer bills beginning in July, would result in the first CL&P rate decrease in more than a decade.

The settlement, which still requires approval by the Department of Public Utility Control, is an extension of last year's agreement with CL&P that froze electric rates at existing levels through 1987.

Professor Emino plans to leave position here

Everett R. Emino, professor and head of the Department of Plant Science, has announced that he will relinquish his post May 31 and resign from the University of Connecticut August 31, 1987.

He will become Assistant Dean for Research and Professor of Ornamental Horticulture in the Institute for Food and Agricultural Sciences (IFAS) at the University of Florida at Gainsville. He will administer the agricultural research programs of 22 departments and 24 research and extension centers throughout Florida.

Emino reported that IFAS receives $45 million in grants and contracts annually to support agricultural research. He noted that Florida is the second largest state in the country in production of horticultural crops: citrus, cut flowers, foliage plants, nursery stock and spring fresh market vegetables.

At Connecticut, Emino was instrumental in establishing a Plant Science Endowment Fund for teaching, research and extension programs in plant science. He negotiated major gifts received by the Bartlett Arboretum in Stamford, Connecticut, and several scholarships for undergraduates in the department.

Emino, with his colleagues, organized and conducted a well-received Viticulture and Enology Seminar at UConn. He assisted Walter Harper in establishing the highly popular Spring and Fall Floral Art Demonstrations and Exhibitions where students show how to make distinctive seasonal floral pieces and arrangements.

He has been a major advocate of agricultural research in the department and was responsible for upgrading equipment such as the computerized environmental control unit in the greenhouse.

He also played a leading role in planning major renovations for departmental research labs in the W.B. Young Building and facilities in the Horticulture Storage Building.

Several faculty during his tenure obtained major grants to support innovative plant research.

A native of Massachusetts, Emino received a Ph.D. degree in horticulture from Michigan State University and served on that university's faculty for five years. He then served three years on the University of Massachusetts faculty, followed by eight and one-half years at Texas A&M and four and one-half years at the University of Connecticut.

Five state residents selected to receive honorary degrees

What do an outstanding actress, a Mohegan Indian, a national political leader, an investor-businessman and one of the world's most respected ornithologists have in common?

Susan Saint James of Litchfield; Gladys Tantaquidgeon of the Uncasville section of Montville; Charles S. Robb of McLean, VA; Stanley Popiel of Stonington; and Roger Tory Peterson of Old Lyme will receive Honorary Degrees at UConn's 104th Commencement Exercises May 24.

The honorary degrees are given to represent the highest intellectual and moral value and reflect the very character and the quality of the University itself.

The Emmy award-winning Saint James, current star of television's "Kate and Allie: in New York," studied at Connecticut College for Women in New London. She will receive a Doctor of Fine Arts Degree.

Tantaquidgeon, who receives a Doctor of Letters degree, is the 10th generation granddaughter of Uncas, the famed chief of the Mohegans. Born in 1899, she was chosen as a young girl to become a cultural custodian for the Mohegan people.

Robb, former Governor of Virginia, is a Phoenix native who attended Cornell University and the University of Wisconsin where he received his bachelor's degree. He earned his law degree from the University of Virginia. He served as Governor of Virginia from 1982-1986.

Popiel, co-founder of Mystic Color Lab, one of the largest of its kind in the country, is a native of Johnston, RI. A former newspaper photographer, Popiel has served on the board of directors of numerous civic and charitable organizations.

Peterson, the author and illustrator of the most successful and influential bird guide of all time, was born in Jamestown, NY. He has had a lifelong interest in birds. He is a member of numerous national and international scientific and professional societies.

The Board of Trustees at the University authorized the award of honorary degrees in 1981, UConn's Centennial Year. The presentation of honorary doctorates at the 1982 Commencement marked the first time in the history of the institution that such degrees were awarded. Honorary master's degrees were bestowed in 1918 and 1934.

events with footage from the unofficial events, such as parties.

Katz requested information on activities not planned by the university, Heneghan said. The MTV crews want footage of people partying to celebrate Spring Weekend, on- and off-campus, Heneghan said. They are looking for major events, such as Carriage House parties, dormitory activities, and fraternity functions, he said.

During Spring Weekend, MTV won't be the only video crew roaming campus. WBOG-TV will film its own rendition of Spring Weekend, which includes footage of the MTV crew. "It'll be like 'The Making of'," Heneghan said.

Dodd to address UConn graduates

Two U.S. Senators and the president of The College Board will address University of Connecticut commencement exercises next month at Storrs and Hartford.

U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., a Willimantic native, will deliver the traditional "charge" to undergraduates at twin morning ceremonies: in the auditorium, beginning at 10 a.m., and the Field House, starting at 11:30 a.m.

Dodd, who was the youngest person in Connecticut elected to the U.S. Senate, also served in the U.S. House of Representatives during the 94th, 95th and 96th Congresses.

Dr. Donald M. Stewart, who became head of the New York City-based College Board in January, will address afternoon exercises for advanced degree recipients in Jorgensen Auditorium. The exercises begin at 3:30 p.m.

Stewart, who received a master's degree from Yale Univeristy, is former president of Spelman college, a four-year liberal arts college historically for black women. It is located in Atlanta, GA.

A Chicago native, Stewart will focus his address on graduate education. He said he attaches the great importance to graduate education, which he called "more important than ever in our society."

Stewart and Dodd will address the University's 104th Commencement Exercises on May 24 at Storrs.

U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R—Conn., is scheduled to speak May 28 at the 16th commencement exercises of the UConn Health Center.

access. Some were escorted on foot by police to a nearby precinct while others were hauled away in paddy wagons, many with their hands tied behind their backs.

The mood of the demonstrators shifted frequently during the protest, with many angrily shouting anti-CIA slogans only to revert moments later to light-hearted banter with their companions and the police.

Among those arrested were antiwar activists Daniel Ellsberg, a former Pentagon employee whose peace activism dates back more than 20 years, and John Stockwell, a former CIA official who was involved in operations in Angola in the mid-1970s.

From a speaker's stand a short distance from the roadway, Stockwell said, "The CIA is. . .the cutting edge out in the field. It actually runs the operations that brutalize the lives of so many people. . .Our purpose should be to try to reach to (CIA employees) mentally, to make them understand. . .how many people suffer because of what they're doing."

Asked for comment on the protest, Ms. Pherson said, "The CIA has employees working all around the world to preserve freedoms. We respect the demonstrators' rights to express their views in a peaceful, lawful way."

She added that the agency appeared to be functioning normally, with no evidence of large-scale absenteeism despite the rush-hour disruptions.

The demonstration attracted a range of participants—from teenagers with "punk" haircuts, to middle aged clerics to elderly grandmothers. They included men in pinstripes and a less elegant group which dropped their pants, exposing a political statement across their naked bottoms: "No Reagan."

Most of those arrested were charged with obstruction of passage, a misdemeanor carrying a $50 fine. Park Police spokesman K.C. Perry said those who scuffled with police would be charged with disorderly conduct and disobeying a police officer, as well as demonstrating without a permit.

...Waldheim denied entry

The Justice Department says that, if Waldheim were to be issued an official invitation to visit this country as the head of state, the Justice Department would address the question of whether he should be permitted to enter. As a head of state, he would normally have diplomatic immunity.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan has "no plans to invite him now."

In Vienna, meanwhile, a spokesman, Walter Greinert, said ambassador Thomas Klestil was summoned to the White House this morning to be told personally by President Reagan of the decision.

"The ambassador has reported this to Vienna just in these minutes," Greinert said.

At the same time, Greinert said, Reagan "reaffirmed the close and friendly relations between our two countries and he has stressed how important it is to continue these relations at the same quality."

Greinert said Reagan told Klestil the decision "in no way was reflecting adverse feelings to the Austrian people."

Waldheim has not sought to come here. Indeed, only one Austrian president, Rudolf Kirchschlaeger, has visited the United States, Greinert said. Kirchschlaeger traveled here in 1984.

One of two Americans will brush with drunken drivers

By Christine Hanley
Campus Correspondent

One out of every two people in the U.S. population will be involved someway in a drinking and driving related accident at one point in their lives.

This frightening statistic was one of many relayed to students Monday night as part of a Drinking And Driving program presented in Middlesex dormitory.

The program was held by members of H.E.A.R.T. (Health Education Alcohol Resource Team), one of the organizations opearted in conjunction with the Alcohol Education Office, which is directed under Ruth Eastman.

The purpose of the Drinking And Driving program is not to look down upon those who drink, but to make those who do aware of the dangers involved.

"Only 14 percent of UConn's population are non-drinkers," said HEART advocate and student Laura Watts, "so we want students to drink smart and know their limits."

In explaining how alcohol will effect a driver, Watts said that the first 20% of every drink goes straight to the front part of the brain, which is the area responsible for judgement.

Once the percentage of alcohol in your blood reaches .10, a person is considered legally drunk and the chances of having an accident are seven times greater than if he wasn't drinking.

At the .15 percent blood-alcohol level, a person is in what is called the "black-out" zone, and unfortunately is what the majority of drunk drivers here at UConn are when they are pulled over for drunk driving, according to police records.

After discouraging students from drinking and driving in the future, the members offered some preventive measures to take when drinking.

"Eat starchier foods," said Watts, "because they slow down the rate of alcohol absorbtion." She also suggested that students alternate non-alcoholic drinks with alcoholic ones, and that they opt for fruitier drinks, because they are absorbed more slowly into the bloodstream. All these things will slow down the process of intoxication.

Before the meeting ended, students attending were given 'alcohol-consumption calculators' which determined the percentage of alcohol in the bloodstream according to a person's weight and the amount of drinks they consumed an hour. "People do keep them and they do work," added Sue England, another HEART member.

Animals produce own food

NEW YORK (AP)—Some microscopic ocean animals hijack photosynthesis machinery from algae they eat and use it to produce their own food, scientists report.

Just how the one-celled animals manage to extract the photosynthetic machinery, called chloroplasts, from the algae remains a mystery, said Diane Stoecker, associate scientist at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts.

The animals are of a type called ciliates, which use fine hairs to propel themselves through ocean waters. In Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature, Stoecker and colleagues report on a study of two kinds of ciliates called tintinnids and oligotrichs.

In surface waters during spring and summer, 42 percent of the animals contain chloroplasts, they report. During autumn and winter the proportion dips to about 10 percent, they said.

Experiments showed that the chloroplasts continue to photosynthesize after they are taken up by the animal, Stoecker said in an interview.

She said chloroplasts had been observed in ciliates before, but that her report

Prenatal lead exposure slows mental growth

BOSTON (AP)—Exposure to very low levels of lead before birth appears to slow children's mental development during their first years of life, a study concludes.

The study found that youngsters advanced more slowly than expected if they had prenatal exposure to levels of lead that are thought to be safe for children. This could mean that fetuses are more sensitive than babies to the toxic effects of lead.

"I think it should be regarded as an indication that something is going on that may be quite worrisome," said Dr. David Bellinger, who directed the study at Children's Hospital in Boston.

Even though the children's mental growth was slower than expected by age 2, they were not considered retarded in any way. The study will continue to see if the prenatal lead exposure is linked to poor mental performance later in life.

"If we see these effects in pre-schoolers and school-age kids, then we do probably have quite a significant health problem, and we need to eliminate all sources of lead exposure, particularly for pregnant women," said Dr. Kim Dietrich, who is conducting similar research at the University of Cincinnati.

Earlier studies found that children with high blood concentrations of lead have developmental problems. But the effect of very low amounts is controversial.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control considers lead levels to be unacceptable for children if they are higher than 25 micrograms for each deciliter of blood. A microgram is one-millionth of a gram; a deciliter is a tenth of a liter

In the Boston study, however, researchers found that mental development is slower if fetuses have lead levels above 10 micrograms per deciliter of blood.

The report was published in Thurdsay's New England Journal of Medicine, along with an editorial by Dr. Nicholas A. Ashford of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Ashford wrote that the findings could be used by some employers to exclude women of child-bearing age from jobs that might expose them to lead. However, he cautioned that men do carry lead home on their clothes and possibly to pregnant women.

Another report in the journal found evidence that benzene exposure causes cancer in factory workers. Ashford said the two studies "confirm the suspicion that very low levels of toxins are capable of causing serious health effects."

Lead is often considered to be a problem of poor black children in cities where old lead-based paint may flake off walls. But Bellinger said his study was conducted largely on well-off whites, in part because "we thought that people would sit up and take notice if middle and upper-middle class kids were found to have some adverse impact due to very low levels of led."

Collectors awaiting locomotive stamps

By Syd Kronish
AP Newsfeatures

U.S. collectors and topical enthusiasts are looking forward eagerly to the issuance of the five locomotive stamps in booklet form on Oct. 1.

The Postal Service says the upcoming stamps are intended to recognize the importance of five distinctly different locomotives that helped launch the railroad era in American beginning in 1829.

The multi-colored stamps—arranged vertically in the pane—are of the commemorative-size "double wide" horizontal type first introduced in 1986 in the "Flag over the Capitol" and the "Fish" booklets.

The top stamp in the new pane depicts the Stourbridge Lion, which in 1829 became the first locomotive (as distinguished from experimental engines) to run in this country. the second stamp in the line features the Best Friend of Charleston, the first locomotive to draw a train in America. Built for the Charleston & Hamburg Railroad in South Carolina in 1830, it pulled 40 to 50 passengers at a speed of 21 miles per hour.

The middle stamp shows the John Bull. It first ran in 1831 in New Jersey and proved very durable. The John Bull is the oldest locomotive preserved in the United States, and it is on display at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. The fourth stamp illustrates the Brother Jonathan built in 1832 for the Mohawk and Hudson Railroad in New York. It was the world's fastest locomotive of its time, with speeds up to 60 miles per hour.

The bottom stamp pictures the Gowan & Marx, built in 1839. It was considered one of the most powerful of the early locomotives. On one of its trips, it hauled 101 four-wheeled cars weighing 423 tons.

Each stamp design includes the name of the locomotive and its year of construction in black type at the upper left. "USA 22" in black type appears in the upper right corner.

The first stamp issued by Kenya this year hailed the 40th anniversary of UNICEF (United Nation's Children's Fund). A major goal of UNICEF this year, in conjunction with the World Health Organization, is to promote simple techniques of treatment designed to reduce infant deaths. The program is called Accelerated Child Survival and Development.

The one-shilling stamp depicts the theme of universal child immunization by the year 1990. The 3-shillings shows the theme of children receiving proper food and nutrition. The 4-shillings features oral rehydration. The 5 shillings illustrates family planning. The 10-shillings emphasizes female literacy. The set of five is available at your local stamp dealer.

Belize, formerly known as British Honduras, has issued a set of eight stamps featuring colorful specimens of its birds and mushrooms. The birds shown on the adhesive are the keel-billed toucan, the collared aracari, the emerald toucanet and the crimson-rumped toucan. The four mushroom stamps depict species well known in the 8,800-square-mile country. A non-stamp label was included on both sets as a tribute to the Belize Audubon Society which is very active in the Central American nation's ecology program.

demonstrated the abundance of chloroplast-bearing ciliates and the continued functioning of the chloroplasts.

In the presence of sunlight, chloroplasts use water and carbon dioxide to produce oxygen and usually sugar, she said.

The animals appear to use chloroplasts as internal food factories, she said. Experiments showed that when the animals were put in the dark and fed their usual algae diet, they stopped growing, she said. That indicated the chloroplasts normally contribute to their diet, she said.

The big picture of the economy

NEW YORK (AP)—To get a picture of the American economy, 1980s-style, you need look only at the roster of the companies going public this spring.

For starters, there is Bally's Health & Tennis Corp., operator of fitness centers under such heavily advertised names as Jack LaLanne and Vic Tanney.

The company has established a good growth record over the last five years through expansion snd acquisitions, notes Norman Fosback, editor of the newsletter New Issues.

Fosback says he believes the company can keep growing at a rate of about 20 percent a year. "The American public's current craze for fitness shows no sign of stopping (though, of course, it might)," he says.

On the opposite side of today's public health issues is another newcomer to public ownership, Health Concepts IV Inc., which runs a group of medical facilities in Kansas that specialize mainly in treatment of alcoholism and drug abuse.

To coastal big-city dwellers, Fosback says, "the presence of a company like Health Concepts in middle America's farm belt may come as a surprise."

"It is in fact a testament to the widespread nature of alcohol and drug abuse in our society," he says. "Sadly-albeit happily for stockholders-Health Concepts IV has made a growth industry out of treatment for this problem."

The mystical works of high-technology medicine is well represented on the new issue scene with names like Digital Diagnostic Systems and Pychiatric Bioscience.

In the decade of video, it is only fitting to see Tele-America Video and Magnum Entertainment making stock offerings.

Since Wall Street has made so much news in the '80s, both for its bull markets and its seeming epidemic of white-collar crime, the securities industry should be represented.

And indeed it is. American Express plans to offer 18 million shares of its Shearson Lehman Brothers holdings.

Music students volunteer their time to repair ...

By Ronald Eckert
Daily Campus Staff

Graffiti and and other vandalism adorn public spaces across the country. UConn is no exception.

But a group of music students here have been an exception to the usual apathy towards vandalism; although the Facilities Department hasn't repaired their damaged practice rooms there is no discord.

About 25 students decided to do something about the vandalism in the recital rooms of the Music Building.

The project to patch the holes in the walls and paint over the graffiti was organized by the Student Advisor Committee and Dorothy Payne, head of the music department.

"This is like a second home for music majors because we spend so much time here," said Rick Kutcher, committee member and part of the cleanup crew.

The recital rooms "had stuff written all over the place," Kutcher said. "They were a big mess and they were't being taken care of," The students said that the university had not responded to requests to repair the rooms.

Kristen Miller, another member of the committee that helped organize the cleanup said "it was awful practicing in such an awful atmosphere." Miller said that the students couldn't have gone through with their project without the help of Payne. "She's been a big help to the department. She cares alot," Miller said.

Payne said the cleanup was "a really nice group effort." She said the students "felt that if they could give them [the recital rooms] a fresh look, that would encourage other students to keep the place sparkling clean."

The problem, according to Payne, is that the building is "open around the clock." This makes monitoring it difficult. "It's not just UConn's problem," Payne said, it's a nation wide problem of providing music students with accessibility to practice rooms and ensuring that those rooms

According to William Spinelli, director of operations, "no one has ever appealed to me to have that [repair of the recital rooms] done."

Spinelli said that the "problem was one of acute vandalism." He said that one of the reasons the rooms haven't been repaired, is "continued vandalism ... there is no way to protect the investment."

'This is like a second home for music majors because we spend so much time here'

Spinelli said the Music Building hasn't been ignored. He said that his department has replaced doors in an effort to make the building more secure. But Spinelli said that vandalism is an "in-house problem." He said the music department has to pay for repairs beyond the normal maintenance of its buildings.

According to Spinelli "people were actually living in those rooms — that's why they were in such deplorable condition." "Those rooms are used for party rooms ... the pianos themselves have been stolen or vandalized. A few weeks ago they totally ruined a piano," he said.

"We have to look at the whole problem and try to make the building secure," Spinelli said. That's impossible he said, "[when] people who leave the building never lock the doors; there's no way to totally secure the building."

Spinelli said the university does "encourage the community spirit aspect of it [the students making their own repairs], but we would use it as a last resort."

The students worked most of last weekend on the repairs. "We had requested that the practice rooms be kept up," Miller said. "We weren't going to see any of it [university repairs] and we wanted something now," Miller said.

"You usually don't get this kind of unity in many other departments,"Jill Kowalchuck, a committee member, said.

The university donated the paint for the project. Payne said the university's "been tremendously helpful."

UConn's shining hour is Spri—..er, Unityfest

This year's Spring Weekend promises to be the best reason for students to avoid the long Friday ride home.

It may also turn out to be the biggest event on campus all semester.

For the uninitiated, this last gasp of pre-final bliss is a blow-out of pagan proportions. Unofficially beginning well into the week, Spring Weekend has been known to snowball into an orgy of quarters games and unofficially cancelled classes by Friday afternoon.

Last year brought new Department of Residential Life regulations designed to cut down on much of the partying (and mess) of the weekend by restricting travel between quads.

Despite student resentment over violations of personal liberty, the affair went well. Without similar bad feeling, this year will probably be even better.

The restrictions were rather abrasive, but despite the grammar school overtones, quite understandable. Two years ago, for example, hallways and bathrooms in Towers Quadrangle were hit hard by weekend partiers who filled the small quad far beyond capacity. Partying is fun, destruction is not.

Another criticism about Spring Weekend is SUBOG's taste in booking bands. That was certainly in question in the past, but this year's choices certainly seem solid. Joan Jett and Cheap Trick are both highly-praised live acts, the latter's credentials firmly established with the classic album "Live at Budokan." And one of UConn's finest Spring Weekend moments in the past was when the S.O.S. Band played here, eclipsing the top-billed Ramones.

Student criticism seems undeserved. The groups may be lacking in present-day chart success, but that should not be as strong a consideration as basic quality. Some have complained that SUBOG did not get Squeeze, another band considered at one time for the weekend concert. While impressive enough on disc, Squeeze has seldom generated the live, arena-pounding excitement that Joan Jett and Cheap Trick are known for.

One real problem is SUBOG's name for Spring Weekend, "Unityfest '87". It is not only pretentious, but misleading. Pointing to student unity (if students are what SUBOG says is uniting) now suggests the campus is experiencing the only time in a year everyone on campus gets together. SUBOG would be wise not to hype such a dumb name and cast a trite overtone on this weekend.

But, all in all, SUBOG has done well. Unless Mother Nature plays a spoiler role, a splendid time seems guaranteed for all. Today's announcement that MTV will be on hand to cover the event nationwide testifies to the excellent job SUBOG has done.

It is nice to know MTV will be here. It would be nicer if UConn has too much fun this weekend to notice.

Tattoos solve hairy problem

During a recent windstorm, a strong gust lifted the hairpiece off the head of a friend of mine and wafted it into the middle of a busy street.

By the time he retrieved it, the tires of several cars and a truck had passed over it. It looked like a mashed rat, which is not what you would want to wear on your head to impress the disco ladies.

In addition to the embarrassment of greeting his date with his hair stuffed in his pocket, he was out the $225 he paid for the toup.

This is not an uncommon problem, I'm told, especially in a city as windy as Chicago.

And with hundreds of thousands of men in our hair-conscious society wearing hairpieces, who can estimate their total financial loss?

Most men who wear hairpieces own at least two of them. They need a spare to wear when they send one out to be cleansed, or if it blows away, or if a bald thief snatches it.

So their investment can be considerable. And when my friend told me about his expensive and embarrassing experience, I began thinking about a possible low-cost alternative to the traditional hairpiece.

And I wondered if it would be possible for a bald man to have his head tattooed so it looked like he had hair.

That would solve the wind problem. Even on some of the downtown plazas, the wind is seldom fierce enough to blow off a man's scalp.

It also would be permanent. No costly replacements. No expensive cleaning bills.

But is it possible? Depending on which tattoo artist you talk to, the answer is yes, no, and maybe.

One Chicago tattoo artist said: "Yeah, we could do dots."

Dots?

"Yeah, tiny dots. Then he'd look like he had hair, but that he had shaved his head."

Ah, sort of like a 5 o'clock shadow all over your head. But what about making it look like regular hair?

"That's been done if a guy has at least some hair. Then we could do strands. And when he combed his own hair over the tattooed strands, it would look like he had a lot more."

Have you ever done it?

"To tell the truth, we usually stay away from heads and faces, although I just gave a girl some eyebrows."

Why did she need tattooed eyebrows?

"Because she didn't have any eyebrows of her own."

That makes sense.

Next, I spoke to Greg Lamont, who does his tattooing in Wisconsin.

He burst out laughing when I asked about tattooing hair on bald heads.

"You're not going to believe this, but I once saw it done. A guy walked in and said he wanted it. We tried to talk him out of it. I told him" 'You know, once we do it, you've got it for life. And if you don't like the style, you can't change it.' But he wanted it, so Tats did it for him, and he seemed happy when he left."

But that wasn't the strangest tattoo Lamont ever saw. He actually knew the late Ralph Johnson, about whom I had only heard.

Johnson was a tall man who had the top of his bald head tattooed with the face of Jesus. He liked to walk up to shorter people and bow. If they were really religious, they would jump 5 feet in the air.

As for tattooing a head of hair, Johnson said he wouldn't do it.

"I don't think it would look very good. At best, it would look like kind of a slicked-down, wet look, which isn't fashionable."

While chatting about tattoos, Johnson revealed an interesting trend. About 35 percent of 40 percent of his customers are women. And he said some parlors report as many as 50 percent.

I asked him if today's women prefer anchors, eagles or the names of their boyfriends.

"No, they are getting butterflies or flowers or strawberries."

I haven't seen women with such things on their arms.

"That's because they either get them on their shoulder blades, hips or buttocks," he said.

You have an interesting job, I said.

"Beats house painting."

The final expert I consulted was the manager of the Chicago Tattooing Co.

Would it be possible to tattoo a bald head so it looked like the guy had hair?

"It depends," he said.

On what?

"Well, if he was on the other side of the street, yeah, it would look like he had a head of hair."

How about up close?

"Up close? Up close it would look like he had a head of ink."

Watch your language!!!

Webster's definition:

Meter-Maid—A woman employed by a police traffic department to issue tickets for illegal or overtime parking, jaywalking, etc..

As it applies on campus:

Meter-Maid—The Antichirst. Often in the body of a short, elderly woman wearing a wig and a Rambo-type green outfit. Widely believed to be responsible for robbing college students of desperately needed cash. Generally disliked by nearly all humans as well as various other life forms.

It broke down to $9.71 a letter. A $68 fine for swearing at a meter-maid. The words were the very same ones that would come to mind if you were to point your third finger towards the sky while at the same time keeping your others clinched in a fist. You would think meter-maids would be used to this sort of thing. Apparently not.

Nor were the UConn police. A questioning of the fine at the station drew the following response:

"What you are telling us is that you didn't like that lady!" screamed the officer.

"Damn right." answered my brother John.

"And what I'm telling you is to tell it to the judge. And if you think of wising off in here, you ain't goin' anywhere!"

I looked at my brother. He looked back at me. Little puffs of smoke were coming out of his ears. I found that unusual. We walked out together in silence.

Webster's definition:

Policeman—A man or woman hired by a police department for keeping order, enforcing the law, and preventing, detecting, and prosecuting crimes.

As it applies on campus:

Policeman—(a.k.a. god) A man or woman hired by a police department to wield supreme executive power over college students. Superiorly trained to catch the most elusive jaywalkers while at the same time, maintaining a fashion-conscious image through the use of skin-tight garments. (See also—Power trip).

We stepped outside where Americans are free to speak.

"I can't believe it. They had an All-Points Bulletin out on me because I swore at a meter-maid. That's ridiculous," said my brother.

"I'd have to agree with you on that."

"I mean, who goes running to the police every time someone bad-mouths them."

"I don't know John, who?"

"No one that I'm aware of, and I would know. My friends and I get bad-mouthed quite often."

"I'd have to agree with you on that."

"If you agree with me one more time, I'll knock your head clear off."

"Not partially off."

"No, clear off."

"Then that would be bad."

"Yes, as far as good and bad goes, that would be bad."

"I see."

We walked to the car. I was barefoot and stepped on a sharp rock. That hurt me. My brother didn't seem to care. That hurt me too. I wondered what this world was coming to when sharp rocks and meter maids were free to do as they pleased.

When we arrived at the car, my foot still hurt. As I opened the door, my brother spoke.

"If I got $68 every time someone swore at me, I'd be rich."

"That's for sure. I always hear people swearing at you, even when you're not around."

He flipped me the bird as we drove away. If only a meter-maid had seen him then.

Letters

A woman's right

•Lately, there have been numerous letters about the issue of posing for Playboy. While these letters have touched on the ideas of exploitation and degradation of females, the respective authors have neglected to discuss a very important point: the idea of choice and free will.

First and foremost, the three women on the car are three out of many women who posed. Above all else, it must be remembered that every women who attended a meeting with the photographer and who participated in a photo session did so out of choice. Nobody put a gun to their heads and said: pose or else. I am sure that none of their boyfriends are like Linda Lovelace's ex-husband who coerced her to participate in the movie Deep Throat.

I would also say that none of these college women are that poor or hungry that they would do anything for money; nor do I think that any of them are drug addicts in search of quick, easy, drug money.

Would-be posers are considered to be mature adults; they make the decision to pose clothed, semi-nude, nude, or not at all. Those women that pose know that the photographs will not be in Mr. Roger's Fan Club magazine, but in a male entertainment magazine.

However, there is no doubt here that there has been a degradation of females to the status of objects. There is no doubt that exploitation is occurring here; Hugh Hefner (Playboy's owner) has always been making a tidy profit on the supposedly artistic and tasteful display of women's bodies.

But, if there is degradation and exploitation of females here at UConn, it is because all those posers did not care if they would be exploited and degraded and also because too many women do not take any action to reduce such treatment in general.

I am against the exploitation and degradation of any human being, but we are dealing with an issue concerning females; therefore, they should bear most of the responsibility in dealing with it. Even though I am not a brother in any fraternity, I do not feel that Sigma Phi Epsilon is totally to blame; after all, they were given the publicity opportunity by all those women who wanted to pose. Sorry, I have no sympathy for the three on the car.

What is the main reason why a female would want to exhibit herself in any "skin" magazine? It is the easy way out for gaining fame, fortune, and a stepping stone to supposedly "legitimate" careers. It is so much easier to take off your clothes than it is to learn "real" skills at college.

I hope those women who were not selected for "The Issue" are not too jealous of the three on the car. I know it may seem unfair to them right now, but in the long run they will be grateful that they only got a little money and no national exposure for taking the easy way out.

Ideally, no individual should pass judgement on anyone who elected to pose, but many students probably will. I personally do not condemn or condone posing, but I have lost some respect for those women who did pose. If it appears as if I would cast the first stone, I will not, I cannot; for I am not totally sinless: I'll probably be the first one in line to buy "The Issue".

Yank morals need loosening

•This letter is in response to Frank Caracansi's editorial (4/22/87). Let's get the major points straight.

Playboy, whether you like it or not, offers a service. They supply you with pictures of nude women if you pay the cover price. Like any other business they are out to make a profit. They would make no profits if men did not buy the magazine or, more importantly, if women did not have to pose. They didn't have to put a "price on their dignity" as Mr. Caracansi states. So in what respect are they "vulnerable" (as Mr. Caracansi calls them)? Let me answer that question: They are vulnerable to the almighty dollar and a chance at fame.

Mr. Caracansi says that the women who pose are "dehumanized." There are those that don't believe this to be the case. Some people consider the photography of nude human beings (both male and female) to be a serious art form that is not "dehumanizing" in any sense.

But to the point. What is tragic is that these women are willing to be "dehumanized" (assuming you believe this to be the case) for profit. Obviously the fault lies within women themselves who allow this to happen, not Playboy for providing a service to which women seem to flock.

Let's not talk of people who give justifications or excuses for their actions. The S.S. soldiers were reasoning human beings who could have thrown down their guns. They didn't because in Hitler's era either they shot the Jew or they were shot themselves. What would you do? Needless to say, it is a tough decision.

And what of the U.S. soldiers that killed the enemy in World War II. Should they be free of guilt and persecution because the United States government sanctioned their killings? You seem to establish a difference between the U.S. soldiers and the S.S. soldier when in fact, there is none

And what of rape? Europe has thousands of nude beaches and Swedish erotica that makes Playboy look like a cub scout magazine. Men in Italy walk arm in arm and are not labelled homosexuals.

In general there is a much more liberal attitude about sex and nudity in Europe than there is in the U.S. and yet their rape rate is less than this country's rate. Has anyone in the U.S. stopped to really think about why this is so?

It is my belief that the stifling attitudes held by Mr. Caracansi and others on sex and nudity are those that are perpetuating serious problems such as rape and STD's in this country.

Mr. Caracansi's closing statement is a farce. It is not man's dignity that put him above brutal cavemen, it is his capability to reason. This is the same reasoning power that these women could have used to turn down a spread in Playboy.

Dignity is an inner quality which no man can take from another (by my definition, at least) but which one man can strip from himself. We are the same as those cavemen unless we use the reasoning power that has placed us above them. The sooner the world realizes this, the better off we'll be.

Welcome Ramadan

•Fasting is an old religious custom. It was practiced by persons and clergy in ancient religions, as well as by Christians and Jews. Though its purposes differed from religion to religion, there was general agreement that fasting was a self-preparation for communication with divinity.

Islam prescribes a rigorous fast for all healthy adult Muslims. Fasting literally means "to refrain". As an Islamic term it means refraining from food, drink and sex, from dawn to sunset every day of the month of Ramadan, the ninth month in the Islamic calendar, which is based on the lunar year. It was during Ramadan that Muhammad (peace be upon him) received his first revelation.

Islam assigned two purposes to fasting, self-discipline and to sympathize with the hungry of the earth. Islamic fasting teaches the Muslim patience, develops a sense of regulating and re-orienting one's understanding of life's basic needs, such as food and sex, and to withstand suffering. The most sensitive areas of human life are food and sex and if prohibited they create a threat to life. While fasting one should refrain from arguing, getting angry or speaking badly about anyone.

The second purpose of fasting is to help and remember the hungry and deprived on earth. The Muslim should sympathize with the hungry and recommend to those who can afford it the voluntary act of feeding a poor neighbor.

The Muslim is commanded by God to fast so he can achieve the pleasure of God and believes that fasting erases all previous sins committed by an individual.

Ramadan is the month of charity, neighborly love and kindness. It is the month of patience, and, the reward of patience is Paradise. Fasting in Islam has become a tool of self-mastery for the better conduct of human life through charity and obedience to God.

Movie Review:

Psst, Michael J. Fox's success is no secret

By Christine Noonan
Daily Campus Staff

Success seems to follow Michael J. Fox wherever he goes, and his latest movie, "The Secret of My Success," is no exception.

In the film Fox portrays a young college graduate from Kansas, Brantley Foster, on his way to New York City to seek his fortune. He arrives in New York only to find himself sharing an apartment with a few unexpected creatures and without a job. So, thrown onto the streets of New York, Brantley must find work. Desperate, he contacts his very distantly-related "Uncle Howard" Prescott, played by Richard Jordan, who is the president of a multi-million dollar corporation. Howard appoints Brantley to the prestigious position of mailroom clerk.

Upon starting his job in the mailroom, Brantley meets Melrose, a cool, witty mail clerk played by James Pankow. Melrose shows Brantley "the ropes," informing him that mail clerks should not consort with the top executives, or "suits," of the firm. Brantley does not agree with this philosophy, especially since one of the "suits" he bumps into is Christy Wills, the only female executive in the firm. Christy is played by Helen Slater who of course becomes the object of Brantley's desire.

Although he yearns for the young and beautiful Christy, Brantley finds himself mixed up with an executive's wife, played by Margaret Whitton. The wife, Vera, invites Brantley into her home, and the funniest scene of the movie takes place when Vera coaxes him into the pool and proceeds to stalk her prey while the theme from "Jaws" plays in the background. This affair does not last, though, as Brantley discovers that Vera's proper title is "Auntie" to him.

Brantley, a determined and upwardly-mobile young man, decides to do research on his own in order to understand the inner workings of the company. Little did he know how much his studying would pay off later on. Upon making his mail rounds, he stops in an empty office to dream of his future and is startled by a phone call from an employee seeking executive advice. Brantley decides to solve this poor employee's problem under the pretense that he is a company "big-wig." Having pulled off this charade, Brantley's plan for success unfolds. Thus begins Brantley's metamorphosis from mail clerk to full-fledged "suit."

Meanwhile, Brantley's pursuit for Christy continues and, of course, the inevitable happens (would there actually be a Michael J. Fox movie without him winning the girl?). Brantley also achieves his business success eventually, as the title implies, and in quite an ingenious way.

All in all, "The Secret of My Success" is an enjoyable film, with only a few problems. Brantley's "fantasy" upon meeting Christy for the first time is overdone. And Brantley's first meeting with Vera is quite suggestive, to put it mildly, especially when Vera is applying her lipstick.

High quality acting by the cast, fine direction by Herbert Ross, a superb screenplay by Jim Cash, Jack Epps, Jr., and A.J. Carothers, and an exciting musical score by David Foster make this upbeat film complete. The similarity between the characters of Brantley and Alex Keaton of "Family Ties" certainly doesn't hurt. "The Secret of My Success," the top-grossing film last week, will undoubtedly continue to be a success.

Traffic accident clouds NFL draft picture

NEW YORK (AP)—The only sure thing in the first round of Tuesday's NFL draft is the first pick—the Tampa Bay Bucs will take Vinny Testaverde, the Miami quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner.

Testaverde has already been signed to a $8.2 million, six-year contract by the Bucs, who were burned last year when they took Bo Jackson with the first pick and he opted for baseball over football.

The draft begins at 8 a.m. EDT at New York's Marriott Marquis Hotel, an hour that forces West Coast teams to be ready to go at 5 a.m., and there's been a lot of trade talk.

The consensus is that there are perhaps 10 players available who can have an immediate impact. That leaves the good teams to play the bad teams with excess players and multiple draft picks in return for that one blue-chipper.

Then come the Indianapolis Colts, who until Saturday night were also a sure thing. They were going to take Alabama linebacker Cornelius Bennett, who is advertised as the second coming of Lawrence Taylor.

They are still likely to take Bennett, but when Randy McMillan was hit by a car in Maryland Saturday night and suffered a broken leg, it left the Colts without their principal running back. That left an opening for the San Diego Chargers, which picks fifth, to exchange choices with Indianapolis, take Bennett, and leave the Colts to choose one of two running backs—Brent Fullwood of Auburn or Alonzo Highsmith of Miami.

The third pick belongs to the Buffalo Bills, who would love to have Shane Conlan, the Penn State linebacker who comes from nearby Frewsburg, N.Y. Conlon is likely to be available lower, and the Bills might trade with Houston, which picks eighth, getting an additional pick and still getting their man.

"Are we willing to trade the pick?" asks Buffalo Coach Marv Levy.

"The answer is yes, if the trade is right. We have to feel unequivocally that we've helped ourselves."

Then on to the other blue-chippers—defensive back Rod Woodson of Purdue; defensive lineman Reggie Rogers of Washington and Jerome Brown of Miami, and running backs Fullwood, Highsmith and D.J. Dozier.

Behind them come such potential first rounders as quarterbacks Kelly Stouffer of Colorado State and Chris Miller of Oregon; linebacker Mike Junkin of Duke; defensive lineman Shawn Knight and Jason Buck of Brigham Young, Danny Noonan of Nebraska, John Bosa of Boston College and Tony Woods of Pitt; offensive linemen Harris Barton of North Carolina and John Clay of Missouri and wide receivers Haywood Jeffires (pronounced Jeffries) of North Carolina State, Mark Ingram of Michigan State and Ricky Nattiel of Florida; running backs Paul Palmer of Temple, Roger Vick of Texas A&M and Kenny Flowers of Clemson, and tight end Rod Bernstine of Texas A&M.

Many of those players are trade targets. San Francisco, for example, still has two first picks, even after trading for quarterback Steve Young from Tampa Bay. They could parlay those two picks for a higher position that could get them Dozier or perhaps a Conlan or Junkin.

One of those San Francisco picks is from Washington, which would love a big linebacker.

The hot name is Alex Gordon, a 240-pounder from the University of Cincinnati who a month ago was projected as a third-rounder but has worked his way into the first round. At this point, he's unlikely to get past the New York Jets, who pick 21st, leaving Bobby Beathard pondering ways to move up without surrendering half his franchise.

There are other possible last-minute deals in the works.

Rangers' coach resigns

NEW YORK (AP)—Tom Webster resigned as head coach of the New York Rangers Monday because of medical problems that limited him to 16 games behind the bench this season, the team said.

Webster, who has been plaqued by an inner ear disorder since December, notified Rangers General Manager Phil Esposito and Madison Square Garden Corp. President Richard Evans of his decision late last week.

"I told Dick and Phil that I do not feel confident that these medical problems can be quickly and fully resolved before the beginning of next season," Webster said. "Therefore I have asked to be relieved of my coaching duties."

Evans said Webster will remain with the Rangers' organization, assisting Esposito with the upcoming NHL draft, scouting and other projects.

The Rangers said they would immediately begin a search for a new coach.

Webster, 38, was named the Rangers' coach Nov. 26 after the team fired Ted Sator, who compiled a 5-10-4 mark. Although Webster retained the title of head coach, his ear problem prevented him from coaching the team for most of the season.

After undergoing surgery Dec. 24, Webster coached only home games for several weeks because his condition prevented him from flying. He continued to have health problems, however, and had to stop coaching completely in late January.

Esposito took over as bench coach for the rest of the season and compiled a 24-19-0 record. Webster was 5-7-4 during his stint as coach. Assistant coaches Wayne Cashman and Ed Giacomin coached two games during the season.

The Rangers, who have not won a Stanley Cup since 1940, finished fourth in the Patrick Division with 34-38-8 record. They were beaten in the first round of the playoffs by the Philadelphia Flyers.

Before coming to the Rangers, Webster was head coach of the Windsor Spitfires of the Ontario Hockey League for 1 1/2 seasons. He also coached two seasons in the American Hockey League.

Webster had an 11-year career as a player in the Central Hockey League, World Hockey Association and National Hockey League, where he played with the Detroit Red Wings, Boston Bruins and California Golden Seals.

Schulhofer prepares Cryptoclearance for Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Scotty Schulhofer has conditioned two champions, but until now he's never been associated with a Kentucky Derby contender.

The colt who brought the 60-year-old trainer to Louisville for the first time is Cryptoclearance.

"So far, it's been great," Schulhofer said on a rainy Monday morning. "I guess I'm relaxed because my horse is doing good."

Schulhofer's two champions were Mac Diarmida, who won the grass title in 1978, and Smile, who won the sprint title last year.

Cryptoclearance put the Derby into Schulhofer's mind when he won a one-mile allowance race Oct. 8 at Belmont Park to conclude his 2-year-old campaign with a record of two wins and one third in five starts.

"He got stronger over the winter, and he's gotten smarter," Schulhofer said. "He went to kindergarten, graduated from grammar school and now he's about ready for college."

Two of Cryptoclearance's three victories this year were in the 1 1/8-mile Everglades on a sloppy track at Hialeah and in the 1 1/8-mile Florida Derby on a fast track April 4 at Gulstream Park. One of his two seconds was by a half-length to Talinum in the 1 1/8-mile Flamingo on a fast track at Hialeah.

The colt, owned by Chicago attorney and land developer Phil Teinowitz, is a leading Derby contender.

Cryptoclearance galloped Monday, as did several other Derby probables. One of them was Demons Begone, the early favorite who won the 1 1/8-mile Arkansas Derby on April 18 at Oaklawn Park to remain unbeaten in three starts as a 3-year-old.

Also working at Churchill down was Gulch, who won the 1 1/8-mile Wood Memorial on April 18 at Aqueduct. The colt, who will run in the Derby as a Peter M. Brant-owned entry with Leo Castelli, went three-quarters of a mile in 1:16 4-5 and galloped out seven-eighths in 1:31. The move under exercise rider Phil Licata was accomplished before a light rain began falling.

Two Derby candidates worked in New York Monday.

Shawklit Won, with regular jockey Richard Migliore in the saddle, went seven furlongs in 1:27 at Aqueduct.

Capote, one of three colts trainer D. Wayne Lukas will start in the Derby, went six furlongs in 1:14 2-5 at Belmont.

...Hannon paces Huskies

From back page

when the game was suspended after 13 innings due to darkness.

The Huskies are on a roll, having won five of their last six, led by the pitching of senior Denise Hannon. Hannon went 3-0 on the week, all shutous, including a perfect game Thursday over the University of Hartford.

On the season Hannon, who has one year of eligibility remaining after missing last season due to illness, is now 14-2 on the season, with an 0.63 earned run average.

She's allowed just nine eanred runs in 100 innings, with 13 walks and 36 strikeouts. In her last eight starts, Hannon is 8-0, with seven shutouts. The only team to score against her in that time was Rhode Island, in a 5-1 UConn win.

The Huskies' pitching staff has combined to post an ERA of 0.60 in 234 1/3 innings this season. Freshman Sue Rybczyk is 6-2 with an 0.24 ERA on the year, while sophomore Sharon Arnold is 4-2 with a 1.17 earned run average.

On offense, junior first baseman Dawn Muzoleski leads UConn with a .347 batting average. She also has eight runs batted in. Leading the team in RBI is freshman shortstop Vicki Bartolucci with 19, to go along with a .302 average.

The Huskies' hottest hitter is third baseman/designated hitter Kris Westra, , who's hitting .406 (13-for-32) in the last 13 games. Overall she's hitting .271 with 14 RBI.

After the Adelphi doubleheader, UConn finishes its regular season Saturday at Rutgers.

Astros pound Mets; Expos snap three game slide

Houston 11, Mets 1

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Deshaies pitched a four-hitter for seven innings and drove in two runs, and Glenn Davis and Billy Hatcher homered as the Houston Astros routed the New York Mets 11-1 Monday night. Houston ended a three-game losing streak and sent the Mets to their third straight loss in the first meeting this season between last year's National League division winners.

The Astros rattled David Cone, 0-2, who was making his first major-league start. Cone gave up 10 runs in five innings, allowing seven hits, walking six and throwing two wild pitches. He also balked on consecutive pitches in the third, and Mets Manager Davey Johnson was ejected for arguing the first call.

Deshaeis, 2-0, allowed only a first-inning home run to Keith Hernandez and went on to strike out seven and walk five. Aurelio Lopez and Julio Solano each worked a scoreless inning to finish the game.

Montreal 6, Philidelphia 4

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Neal Heaton allowed five hits in eight innings and Andres Galarraga drove in three runs as the Montreal Expos defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 6-4 Monday night, snapping a three-game losing streak.

Tim Burke relieved Heaton, 3-1, who struck out six and walked one, when he was hit on the right leg by a line drive hit by leadoff batter Juan Samuel in the ninth. Milt Thompson followed with a single and Mike Schmidt hit a three-run homer with one out, getting the Phillies within two runs.

After Lance Parrish singled, Randy St. Clair relieved Burke and got the last two outs for his third save.

Giants 7, Braves 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Pitcher Kelly Downs singled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and Chili Davis hit a two-run single and a homer as the San Francisco Giants downed the Atlanta Braves 7-3 Monday.

Downs, in his second season, collected the first game-winning RBI of his career when he scored Matt Williams from second and broke a 1-1 tie.

Williams started the two-out rally with a single and Robby Thompson followed with a walk before Downs' hit. After Will Clark walked to load the bases, Davis delivered his two-run single, chasing Rick Mahler, 2-2.

Downs, 2-0, allowed six hits, walked three and struck out four. He was relieved after facing four batters and allowing two runs in the seventh.

Scott Garrelts picked up his fourth save.

...Fradkin defeats St. Johns, B.C.

From back page

Starting against St. John's, Fradkin scattered eight hits in six-plus innings of work, allowing two earned runs while fanning two Redman and walking five.

Against BC, Fradkin fired a complete-game, three-hit, ten-strikeout victory. Facing five batters over the minimum, he had a strikeout in every inning and walked only one.

Fradkin 4-2 overall, is now 2-0 in Big East action with a 2.65 ERA against league opponents.

The Huskies will face Massachusets at home today at 3 p.m. at J.O. Christian Field. The game will be the 110th meeting between the two teams, with Massachusets leading the series 56-52-1.

HUSKY NOTES: UConn is 17-0 when leading after six innings, but only 1-11 when trailing after six. The Huskies only come-from-behind victory was a ten-inning, 5-4 win over Boston College.

Since returning from their 2-7 Spring trip down South, the Huskies have played at a .739 clip, winning 17 while losing only six. UConn is 13-3 against New England opponents, 5-0 against other Connecticut opponents and 9-2 at home. Against Connecticut-based opponents, UConn has scored 82 runs and allowed 19 runs for an average score of 16.4 to 3.8.

Fuchs on U.S. National Team

Will travel to Netherlands to compete this summer

By Jim Amspacher
Daily Campus Staff

UConn All-America junior forward Tracy Fuchs has been named to the 1987 United States National Field Hockey Team by Boudewijn Castelign, head coach of the U.S. team.

Fuchs becomes one of 16 members of the elite national team which represents the United States in all national and international competition.

Fuchs has been invited to play on the U.S. National Team as it tours the Netherlands June 8 through June 22.

"We're going to play some Holland club teams and then we'll play in a tournament against the national teams from Germany, Australia, Holland, and Korea," said Fuchs.

Fuchs will also compete with the team at the 1987 U.S. Olympic Sports Festival in July and has a chance at competing in the Pan Am Games in August.

According to Fuchs, if the national team does well at the Pan Am Games, then it will compete as the U.S. representative in the 1988 Olympics.

Whether or not Fuchs will still be on the team depends on her performance.

"Castelign is unsure of who he wants at my position (forward) so he's giving everybody a chance," said Fuchs.

"Tracy is the top forward playing in college right now," said UConn Head Coach Diane Wright. "It's a challenge, but she is ready for it."

Fuchs, who has twice been a First Team All-America player at UConn, is the only national team player who has college eligibility remaining. At 20, Fuchs is also the youngest member of the national team.

"It's an exception for a college player to be chosen," said Wright. "Most of the people on the national team are in their mid-twenties, and have much more experience."

"For Tracy it's a great oppurtunity at the right time," said Wright.

"It's good for Tracy to get international playing experience," said Wright. "This level of play is little bit more physical than the college level."

Wright said playing in the summer is good for Fuchs because she won't have to miss any school and she will be better prepared for UConn field hockey in the fall.

"I'm really looking forward to playing," said Fuchs. "I want to be ready for it, and I want to learn as much as I can."

Fuchs is the third UConn field hockey player under 13-year head coach Wright to be chosen to the U.S. National Team. Lauren Fuchs, Tracy's older sister, was a member of the national team in 1981 and Janet Ryan was on the national club in 1985.

Tuesday Digest

Big East names Fradkin

UConn freshman righthander Dave Fradkin was named Big East Conference baseball Pitcher-of-the-Week Monday.

Last week Fradkin picked up two Big East wins with a 6-2 victory over St. John's on Monday and three-hit 4-1 win over Boston College Saturday.

Fradkin's award marks the third successive week that a Husky pitcher has earned Conference pitcher of the week honors. Last week, junior Stew Strong was chosen and freshman Charles Nagy was the league's top hurler two weeks ago.

Softball team prepares for Adelphi

The softball team opens up the last week of its season today against Boston College at 2:30 p.m. at the softball field, but the crucial test for the Huskies comes Thursday when Adelphi comes to Storrs for a 2:30 p.m. doubleheader.

For the fourth year in a row, UConn's post-season hopes will be determined in the final week.

The Huskies are the second-ranked team in the Northeast, with Adelphi being top-ranked. UConn is looking for a berth in either the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I national tournament or the 16-team National Invitation Championship.

Both tournaments will be held May 15-17 at Western Illinois University in Macomb, Ill.

For UConn and Adelphi, going into the final week of the season as the top two teams in New England is nothing new. In 1984 and 1985, the two teams battled for the top ranking in the region and the NCAA tournament berth.

In 1984, the Huskies traveled to Adelphi, and lost 2-1 in 15 innings and 4-3, the only losses in a 22-2 year for UConn. In 1985, the Panthers came to Storrs in the final week and topped the Huskies by identical 2-0 scores.

In both years, Adelphi went to the tournament.

Last spring UConn won four of six from the Panthers, but finished third in the region behind UMass and Adelphi.

The two teams have already met this year at Adelphi, with the Panthers winning the first game 1-0 and the second game ending at 1-1
